CHECKLIST

What we need from Jackson Roofing

Twelve things, and why each one matters. Most take a few minutes. The quickest way to send them is the intake form; the past-customer list goes in the CSV template. Never send passwords by email or text: for website and Google access, add Wing as a user instead.

This week needed before launch Your account in your name, we guide you Before day 8 needed for the first Daily 50

- [ ] 1. Logo and brand colours — This week
  Your logo goes on the Proof Page homeowners see, the app header and every report. Homeowners trust a name they recognize. A PNG or SVG file and your main colour (or just your website) is enough.

- [ ] 2. Service area: cities and counties — This week
  We build your homes, storms and permits from county and city records. Cities you do not serve stay off the list so reps never waste a call. Today we have: Plano, Frisco, Allen, McKinney, Richardson and Rockwall. Add or remove any.

- [ ] 3. Average job size and prices — Before day 8
  Your typical re-roof price, price per square and common extras. It lets the app rank homes by job value and show a rough range next to the LiDAR roof size. It is never shown to homeowners.

- [ ] 4. Licence or registration numbers — This week
  Texas has no state roofing licence. We use your legal business name and phone on every message, and record your city registrations (Plano, Allen, Frisco, McKinney) for permits. Also your current insurance certificate, so a homeowner who asks gets it right away.

- [ ] 5. Google review link and Google Business access — This week
  Your review link goes in every after-job text, so happy customers can leave a review in one tap. Add Wing as a Manager on your Google Business Profile so we can post updates, photos and storm notices that help you show up in the map results. We never change your hours, phone or name without asking.

- [ ] 6. Website access — This week
  We add local pages and posts that help jacksonroofingco.com rank in your cities, and the "Was my house hit?" sign-up page homeowners use to ask for storm alerts. Add Wing as a user (editor or admin) or introduce us to your web person. Also add Wing as a user on Google Search Console if you have it.

- [ ] 7. Past-customer list — Before day 8

  Past customers are your warmest leads. When a storm crosses their street, they come first. Use the CSV template: name, address, phone, email, job date, and whether they said it is OK to contact them. An export from your current software or a spreadsheet works too.

- [ ] 8. Owner phone and email for storm alerts — This week

  The morning-after storm alert goes here, so Chris hears about a storm before the competition does. Add a second person if someone else runs the morning.

- [ ] 9. Team members who need a login — This week

  Name, role, mobile and email for each rep, office person or manager. Each person gets their own login, so calls and notes show who did what and reports are fair.

- [ ] 10. Preferred texting and calling hours — This week

  We suggest texting 9 am to 7 pm Monday to Saturday, noon to 6 pm Sunday, Central. The legal window for calls is 9 am to 8 pm Monday to Saturday, noon to 8 pm Sunday, Central, max 3 calls per home per day. Tell us if you want it narrower (for example no Sundays). The app blocks sends outside your hours.

- [ ] 11. Texting number and phone lookup accounts — Your account

  Texts go out from a local number registered in your company's name with the phone carriers (this approval can take one to three weeks, so we start it on day 1). Homeowner phone lookups and the do-not-call scrub also run on an account in your name, including the Texas no-call list (texasnocall.com, in your name) plus the national list. We walk you through each sign-up; we never sign up for you or hold your passwords. For the carrier form we need your legal business name, EIN and business address.

- [ ] 12. Consent and legal sign-offs — This week

  You approve, in writing: the service agreement, the call script and text templates, the consent wording on the "Was my house hit?" page, and the ground rules in the FAQ. Nothing goes out in your name until you have signed off on the words.

What we will never ask for

- Your passwords, card numbers or bank details by email or text.
- Permission to text cold homeowners automatically. A person taps send on every cold message.
- Promises about insurance payouts or deductibles.
